The family supporter

key task “to connect”
Family supporters
WHO are they?

- Men/women who have experienced living in social exclusion (by poverty and/or migration) and who experience(d) exclusion from the inside.
- Each share of his own individuality and its experiences.
- Knows the feelings of pain, anxiety, uncertainty.
- Knows the meaning of the language, attitudes, strategies to survive.
- Managed to get (partially) out of poverty.
Why working with family supporters (experts by experience on social exclusion)?

• Point of view of the Agency
  – Increase the accessibility of service
  – Bring in the perspective of social exclusion

• Point of view of families
  – Recognition

• Point of view of family supporters
  – Valorisation of experiences
  – Recognition of the willingness to help each other

• General
  – Bridging the gap – looking for the connection
My school life was very short. I liked going to school. It was a revelation and an opportunity to develop and to explore. I have been authorized to the 1st year secondary school. After talking with my brother, my father came to the conclusion that I shouldn't go to school no longer. My world collapsed: I did not understand...

It was a turning point in my life. I could not resist my parents and brothers. For no good reason, I stopped. I could read and write and it seemed apparently sufficient for a girl.

Today I like to explain and encourage all parents to stimulate their child(ren) to go to school as soon as possible.

HISTORY?

- Horizonproject 1993-1995 (pilot)
- Strategic planning 1996:
  - intercultural mediators and experts by experience
- Training 1997-1998
  - 17 experts by experience in house training
- Evaluation (2002) and renewed ‘profile’ and methodology since 2004
- 2017: 70 family supporters, working in teams with doctors, nurses, volunteers
  - Intervision, supervision
I was very aggressive, destructive and rebellious. That was my self-protection and a way of survival. One of the things I've learned is that the life that I lived in poverty was not my fault, neither I have to blame my parents or people out of my close environment.

My way of looking at myself, others, and society is expanded and it decreased my anger.
Bridging the gaps and make the connection for socially vulnerable families with:

• The organisation
• The service providers
• The society
  – Formal and informal network
  – Other services (concerning housing, employment, educational training, health, administration...)

The Family supporter
Core function
Bridging the different gaps:

- A structural and participation gap
- A gap in terms of ‘emotions’
- A gap in terms of ‘knowledge’
- A gap in terms of ‘competences’
- A gap concerning resources

BY Building a bridge, linking the different worlds, supporting the family project, keeping the perspective of the experience of poverty and social exclusion in mind...
I learned not to be a rescuer of the family, but to engage me in “a traject’ with the family. I sincerely listen to better understand the 'inside' of poverty. I'm more attentive to their feelings, their thoughts and their meanings.
Family supporters
Tasks and methodology

Tasks to do, methods to use:

Draw attention to, reflect on and recognize existing mechanisms and patterns of social exclusion

Redefining the meaning of verbal and non-verbal communication; Being present; Mirroring; “excusing” people or situations; Mediating; Offering practical support; Referring; Translating (language)

Challenges:

Determine own limits; always balancing; communication with other service provider
Family supporters
ADDED VALUE

- For the organisation and professionals: « experts hold the organization vigilante when it risks to forget or overlook the socially vulnerable people in the development and implementation of the service »

- For the families: « I recognized that a family supporter might make ‘a connection’ much faster and more profound. »
Family supporter
ADDED VALUE

• For the other services: « Trough working together with the family supporter, I became aware of the experience of social exclusion. It became very visible how I looked from my own perspective and how I judged people regarding my own norm and values.»

• For the family supporter: « I feel recognized in my expertise.»
